Frankfort Fire Department Buys Gas Masks

Members of the Frankfort Volunteer Fire Department voted to purchase two gas masks at $50.00 each, when they met Tuesday evening for their regular monthly business session. Word was received that the reducer for the hydrant connection was on the way and should arrive within a few days. Theft of this important part caused great concern among the firemen since without it none of the hydrants except those on the main street could be connected to the pumper. Only direct pressure could be used in case of fire.

Another item brought up at the meeting was the consideration of new applications for city water. Some effort will be made to secure enough material to grant requests in cases where homes recently purchased did not have this facility.

Plans were discussed for the department's annual get together dinner set for early in March.

Enough To Make A Horse Laugh

The American public is often regaled and disgusted with the antics of the New Deal crackpots in Wash., but the following article which has appeared in the daily papers the past week, shows how nutty the bureaucrats are in handing out nonsensical advice:

A native New Yorker and Harvard graduate now serving the war production board as chief of its industrial branch, office of civilian supply has gravely advised farmers to conserve horseshoes by—among other things—removing the shoes when the horses get thru work periods.

This advice is contained in treatise prepared by Edward R. Gay, formerly an executive of a New York paper company, which is being mailed to hardware dealers who appeal to WPA for help in obtaining horseshoes. Other recommended methods of horseshoe conservation include elimination of nonproductive use and abolition of unessential styles.

Rep. John W. Flannagan (D., Va.) called the attention of his colleagues to Mr. Gay's masterpiece today with the recommendation that it should be preserved among the archives of the republic.

Commenting on Gay's Harvard training and New York address Flannagan said: "A splendid background for one selected to administer the machinery and parts program for the farmers of America". He said Gay's treatise had been received by E. H. Powers and J. T. Cecil, operators of hardware stores in Bristol, Va.

The congressman said things must have changed since he left the farm, because he never heard of styles in horseshoes. He inquired if box toes, pointed toes, patent leather, and tan shoes have come in vogue for horses in recent years.

He said he presumed that there now are zipper horseshoes, stating he could think of no other explanation for the WPA suggestion for removing shoes after work. He quoted from the treatise: "Horse owners can in many cases save shoes by removing the shoes immediately after a period of necessary road work or other work where shoes are necessary only during certain periods."

"So, Mr. Farmer," Flannagan said, "all you have to do now in order to comply with the new rules is to buy the zipper style, zip them off at night, and zip them back in the morning. Alas, it has taken the stuffs right out of that dear old poem we all used to recite about the village blacksmith."

In regard to eliminating nonessential uses of shod horses, Flannagan pictured the farmer and his family hoofing it to church after the farmer has first "run down to the barn and put a fresh batch of straw in old Dobbin's stall to cushion her tootsie woosies against the hardness of Mother Earth."

The poor benighted New Dealer who composed the above masterpiece of idocy does not realize or care that it costs the farmer a dollar per shoe to have a horse shod or that if horse shoes were to be taken off and put on as he suggests there would not be much left of a horse's hoof.

BUROCRATS PLOTTING TO WRECK PRESS IS CHARGE

Radical elements in the Washington administration hate all newspapers because they tell the American people too much about the efforts being made to bring about a totalitarian system in this country.

The radical elements feel that if they can curb the production of paper they can soon put the newspapers out of business or make them government propaganda mouthpieces like the papers of Europe.

One of the first steps in the establishment of a dictatorship in a country, is to obtain full and complete control of the avenues of communication and information in a country.

Thanks to wide awake Republicans the matter mentioned is to be investigated and stopped before it has a chance to get a head start.

"I understand from very reliable sources," said Rep. Paul Shafer (R., Mich.), "that certain elements in this administration are talking about cutting consumption of printing paper, newspaper as well as book stock, to about 50 per cent of 1942 consumption. I want to see the men who are doing this planning and scheming questioned by a committee of the house."

"The excuse for very drastic curtailment of paper production is directly traceable to the hopeless bungling of the man power problem and the peculiar mental gymnastics by which OPA estimates price ceilings. I am not so sure that some of this bungling hasn't been designed for the purpose of wrecking the American press. I believe the problem is altogether too serious to permit the dreamers and extremists, who seem determined to wreck our civilian economy to have their way."

DEDICATION SERVICES WELL ATTENDED

The morning and afternoon dedication services of the new Trinity Lutheran church at New Lenox last Sunday were largely attended in spite of very inclement weather. At the morning service Rev. Walter J. Geffert, pastor of this church and of the Immanuel Lutheran church of Mokena preached the Dedication sermon. In the afternoon services Rev. H. Hemmter, pastor of Mt. Olive Lutheran church of Chicago and Regional vice president of the English district was the guest speaker.

Miss Edith Stonehouse, soloist, the Junior and Senior choirs sang at both services. At the close of the afternoon services luncheon was served by the ladies of the church.

In the evening Wm. Wunderlich of Joliet showed moving pictures taken of the cornerstone laying last summer.

The Rev. Mr. Hemmter in the course of his sermon stated that it was quite an outstanding event to dedicate a small church whose principles were for peace and righteousness in comparison to the huge plants being erected all over the country to manufacture materials for the destruction of humanity. The new edifice which is partially completed, still offers quite commodious quarters for the time being, the basement proper being used for the church auditorium with a side room for the Sunday School classes and two other rooms housing the heating plant and storage space. The congregation expects to complete the edifice after the war.

OPA CRACKS DOWN ON AUCTION CEILING PRICE VIOLATIONS

Both the office of price administration and the department of agriculture say they have received many complaints of used farm machinery being sold at "outrageous" prices. OPA enforcement officials consider this one of their most pressing problems and are preparing "to crack down on violators."

Cases of farmers offering a "bale of hay and a tractor" at auction sales as a single item in an attempt to evade OPA ceilings on used tractors have been brought to the attention of the government officials.

In some instances, according to OPA, used tractors in these combination deals have sold at prices substantially above their original cost.

Price enforcement officials disclosed that an amendment to the OPA order putting ceilings on the prices of used tractors, combines, corn pickers, binders, and hay balers is being drawn up to outlaw these "combination deals". The OPA order on used farm equipment was issued Jan. 5, and prohibit sales above certain percentage of the list price, depending upon the age of the equipment.

David Meeker, chief of the production supplies program branch, department of agriculture, said members of the county war boards have been asked to report to the department violations of the OPA ceiling order. He said the department did not have the authority or responsibility of enforcing the OPA order, but brought violations to the attention of the enforcement officials of OPA.

Meeker said ceiling prices on other used farm equipment seemed unlikely because of enforcement difficulties. He said there were from 350 to 375 separate items of farm equipment.

Rep. Lottie O'Neill Backs Fuel Oil Quiz

The Illinois legislature has named ten senators to push an inquiry into the OPA fuel oil confusion existing in Illinois.

The only opposition to this action came from Democrats who used the old worn out cry that investigation would be "anything but patriotic" but they were over ruled and the inquiry was ordered.

Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, R., Downers Grove, pioneer woman legislator who has a son in the army in Iceland, made the motion for house concurrence in the senate action.

She read the resolution reciting hardship and inconvenience resulting from OPA fuel oil edicts, charging bungling, and raising the question of whether the rationing is really helping states which lack transportation facilities.

Senators appointed to the investigating committee were Earle Benjamin Searcy, R., Springfield, Walker Butler, R., Murphysboro, Stanley J. Mondala, D., Chicago and Nicholas L. Hubbard, D., Mount Pulaski.

Representatives named to investigate were Mrs. O'Neill, R., Wm. G. Thon, R., Oak Park, Lyle M. Prescott, R., Dixon, J. L. Wellinghoff, D., Belleville, and Geo. Garry Noonan, D., Chicago.

Woman Killed When Car Skids Into Truck

An icy spot on the Lincoln Highway about half a mile east of New Lenox caused a fatal auto accident when Mrs. Alta Libkie, 111 Logan St., Joliet, was killed instantly in a freakish crash as she was thrown from a car driven by her husband, Benjamin, into a truck as the car and truck smashed together.

The accident was witnessed by Dr. Ernest G. McMahon of Mokena, who was following in a car behind the truck.

Dr. McMahon said he saw the Libkie car, going west, apparently hit an icy obstruction on the pavement, swinging the car sideways and directly into the path of the oncoming truck, driven by Robert Rainford of Mokena. Mrs. Libkie's neck was broken by the impact of her body on the truck, according to the state police. The accident occurred Monday afternoon about 3 p. m.

After being struck by the truck, the Libkie machine spun around again, tossing Mr. Libkie to the pavement. He was taken to the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet, where it was discovered he suffered six broken ribs and a fractured collar bone, besides numerous bruises.

Both the Libkie car and the truck were travelling at a moderate rate of speed.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Libkie, who was 56 years old, is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Clarence Thoenig of Chicago Heights and Rose of Joliet; two sons, James of Joliet and Robert of Brookfield; one sister, Mrs. Oran Greathouse of Dix, Neb., and three brothers Dan Doty of Samsville, Ill., and Louis Kempton of Knightsville, Ind. There also is one grandson.

Funeral services were held yesterday (Thursday) afternoon from the Carlson Funeral Home in Joliet to the First Christian Church.

The Rev. J. Warren Leonard officiated. Burial was made in the Hills of Rest Cemetery.

There is a state bounty of $3 a head on foxes.

GAS RATIONING AID TO SMALL TOWN MERCHANT

Tire and gasoline rationing offer the small town merchant an opportunity to regain much of the business he has lost to stores in larger towns, "but he must not expect to get this business without some effort on his own part."

This conclusion by Prof. P. D. Converse of the University of Illinois results from what is believed to be the first consumer survey of its kind made since driving restrictions. The survey was made in Central Illinois, "it is believed the results are typical of what would be found in many parts of the country." It covered 538 Central Illinois homes in eight communities ranging from 250 to 37,000 population.

The study and conclusions are presented in a special eight page, free bulletin of the University's Bureau of Economic and Business Research.

"Residents in the smaller towns have made and expect to make more changes in their buying practices than do those in the larger city," Prof. Converse found. Consumers in the small towns expect to buy more at home, thus giving the small town merchants an opportunity to increase their sales. However, many consumers fear they will be unable to get the goods they want in the small town stores. Others fear that the local merchants will charge unreasonably high prices.

"Families with higher incomes, made and expect to make more changes in their buying habits than those with lower incomes. They have reduced their purchases to a greater degree and are making fewer out of town shopping trips."

Speaking Sports

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

WHILE dyed-in-the-wool American league followers probably agree that there never has been a good war, they are more likely to catch a glimpse of the silver lining than are fans of the National league. Because of the war the junior circuit may witness a close championship race instead of the customary parade headed by the New York Yankees. In the unlikely event you have forgotten, the Yankees won the series in 1936, '37, '38, '39 and '41. They won the American league crown in '42, but failed to meet the Cardinals' challenge.

Even though the Yankees weren't good enough to win the series last year, they were good enough to lead the league with a nine-game margin. That is, they were nine games ahead of the Red Sox, who finished in second place. The rest of the clubs were so far behind they had to send up smoke signals to congratulate the champs.

Improved Outlook

Last fall the 1943 situation looked just as bleak for the remaining seven clubs of the league. The armed services had claimed a good percentage of players from other clubs. The Yankees were figured to continue as usual, their roster listing a high average of family men.

But the war clouds continued to grow blacker and even the Yankee squad proved vulnerable. Tommy Henrich was called from the 1942 team. Phil Rizzuto followed. Then Charley Ruffing—no longer in the prime of his youth, but a very valuable individual—took his departure. First Baseman Buddy Hassett followed him. Red Rolfe left for a coaching job at Yale, where he reports himself completely satisfied.

Probably the biggest blow to Joe McCarthy came when he heard he was losing Joe DiMaggio to the armed services. McCarthy was quoted as saying "Whatever he does is his affair. I have nothing to say." A New York sports writer made the excellent point that McCarthy's wartime commentary will scarcely outlive Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

Closer Race

These factors point to a tighter race in the American league, which should do much to increase box office income.

It is expected that the loss of big names will cause some decline in revenue. But that loss won't be as great as it would have been if the major leagues hadn't provided their full share of America's fighting men.

The loss of some of the game's biggest stars probably won't be felt as much as some observers expect. The only real money names in baseball since Dizzy Dean are Bob Feller and DiMaggio. And none of the three compares to Babe Ruth as an attraction.

For all his greatness DiMaggio wasn't altogether popular around New York. His repeated holdouts probably had something to do with that state of affairs. He listened to too many persons who weren't connected with baseball, and the advice wasn't always the best.

DiMaggio's greatest salary was $42,500—quite a bit less than the fabulous $80,000 Ruthian salary. Of course he didn't draw cash customers to the turnstiles the way Ruth did—but neither has anyone else. His best year from the standpoint of gate receipts came in 1941 when he hit safely in 56 consecutive games. There was as much interest in that hitting streak as there was in one of Ruth's home run binges.

Feller has been in the navy for some time—but the fans still turn out to see his team play ball.

That sports fans pay more attention to a close contest than they do to big names seems to be proved by the success hockey is enjoying this season. Some of the most famous names of the ice game have been lost to the armies and navies of Canada and the United States. But the fans have been breaking attendance records merely because they like a good fight.

Despite the loss of men like DiMaggio and Feller, baseball likely will be able to shuffle its way along during the coming season.

Sporting

("I feel sorry," Judge Landis remarked with a wink, "for you baseball writers who won't get to Florida or California this spring.")

Judge, you can send us to the equator, Mexico City or Baffin Bay. North Pole or South Pole's our alma mater.

Where we can loaf as the others play. We can keep cool as the rookies scramble. In the hot sun where the pelicans dream—

We can keep warm as the icebergs ramble—

We are not trying to make some team.

The Hall of Fame

Baseball's Hall of Fame has come to a rather abrupt pause lately. But as long as this institution looks back to the past, minus any use of oil or rubber, apart from any priorities, there is no reason now why it shouldn't be brought back to life.

My friend Bob Stedler, a veteran from the Buffalo Evening News, a sporting writer who knows what it is all about, has brought out the best new nomination in sight.

The name is Jimmy Collins, in my mind the greatest artist that ever played third base, one of the top infield artists of all time. Jimmy Collins, starting for 19 years, was in many ways the greatest ballplayer Boston ever knew.

Collins had speed, smartness, grace. He revolutionized the art of playing third base.

As Bob Stedler writes—"He was the first third baseman to break up the deadly bunting attack of McGraw, Keeler and Jennings from the old Baltimore Orioles."

I happen to know what McGraw, Keeler and Jennings thought of Collins. In their minds there was no one else even close.

Great Third Basemen

In the last 40 or more years, I've seen many great third basemen come and go.

In this list I can give you Jimmy Collins, Art Devlin, Buck Weaver, Bill Bradley, Frank Baker, Pie Traynor and a few others.

Pie Traynor was one of the great est. Pie was the leading offensive star. And Pie, with Bradley, Devlin and others, could play third base. But Collins was the fastest and most graceful of them all. Jimmy Collins was to third base what Hal Chase was to first—and Larry Lajoie to second.

Jimmy made all the hard plays look easy and simple.

On the offensive side, Collins batted well over .300 with the dead ball for six years.

On the defensive side, he was the fielding champion of both the National and American leagues.

As the late Jack Doyle told me shortly before his death—"I have seen them all for nearly 50 years. There was only one Jimmy Collins. He was the top and the true artist."

All-Graceful

If I had to pick an all-graceful team it would be along these lines: Catcher—Johnny Kling of the Cubs.

Pitcher—Walter Johnson of Washington.

First base—Hal Chase of the Yankees.

Second base—Napoleon Lajoie of Cleveland.

Shortstop—Herman Long of Boston.

Third base—Jimmy Collins of Boston.

Outfield—Speaker, DiMaggio and Terry Moore. These were artists. But outside of Lajoie and Speaker, no one in this list belongs above Jimmy Collins, the Boston manager who led his team in a winning assault in the first of all-world series games back in 1903 when Boston beat Pittsburgh, headed by Harry Wagner, Tommy Leach, Deacon Phillippe, Sam Leever, Jesse Tamm, Lefty Davis and one of the best ball clubs of all time.

Ask Hans Wagner or Big Bill Deneen. Ask anyone who ever played with or against Jimmy Collins.

Belated Tribute

In the first vote for the Hall of Fame, Collins polled one of the highest votes and just fell short of nomination. Then the old guard began to fade as younger fellows came along with only a faint memory of the past.

They began to forget about Jimmy Collins, only remembering the stars they had seen.

In my opinion, it would be a crime to leave Jimmy Collins off the roster that belongs to baseball's Hall of Fame.

MURDER at PIRATE'S HEAD

By ISABEL WAITT

W-N-U RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Judy Jason, who is telling the story, received an anonymous letter enclosing $800 and asking her to bid for an abandoned church to be auctioned the next day. She suspects, in turn, each of the guests at the inn where she is staying. They are the Reverend Jonas DeWitt, Lily Kendall, Thaddeus Quincy, Albion Potter, Hugh Norcross and his sister, Bessie, and Victor Quade, a writer who has just arrived. Judy bids for the church and gets it. After the auction the body of a man identified as Roddy Lane is found in a chest in the basement of the church but disappears. Victor has asked who plays golf.

Now continue with Judy's story.

CHAPTER V

"Why, several of the guests. Hugh Norcross and the minister. I don't think Mr. Potter does anything but paint, but Bessie Norcross sometimes plays. You don't mean—?" Again the picture of Mr. De Witt saying what he'd like to do to Roddy as he made his vicious stroke on the lawn came to my mind.

"You didn't see a golf club in the basement, near the chest, I mean, did you?"

"Nothing but that hand with the ring—flashing horribly." I hid my face in my hands and shuddered.

"I'm a brute," Victor said. "We won't talk about it any more."

"We will, too," I flared. "There wasn't any golf club there when I examined the chest after the auction. I'm sure of that, because I hunted around for something to pry up the lid with, and had to use a bobby pin. Why? Did you see one down there tonight, Mr. Quade?"

"I did," he said, "but I didn't mention the fact to the others. It was back of the chest, and there was a dark stain on it that looked like blood."

"Blood!" I repeated, horrified. "Positively. And in the chest, too. Not much, but a stain at one end. I made De Witt and Potter stay on the stairs while I investigated with a flash."

"So you went ahead—?"
"And opened the chest—it was unlocked—to find it empty. Then I asked the others to scout around the cliff path, beyond the basement door to see if friend Lane was staggering along wounded. But I knew better. I wanted to get rid of them and have time to examine the chest and shut it up again."

I was shaking all over, yet enjoying it in a way—not the murder, of course; but the mystery, the excitement, being mixed up in the middle of it with such a topnotcher as Victor Quade. Suddenly I was filled with terror. "Could his—his body have been in the chest when I was trying to open it after the auction?"

"Undoubtedly. The killer had put it there for safekeeping, but something made him decide he'd better get rid of it. Anybody know about that old chest?"

"Everybody. All our guests. They knew I'd bought the church and I bragged quite openly about using the old sea box for a hope chest."

"Just when was that?"
"I don't know. Supper time, when I was serving. I think. They all congratulated me."

Victor Quade's dark eyes glinted. "You'll never want it for a hope chest now. Tell me, why did you buy the church?"

Should I tell him? I wanted to, but the $500 still hidden in my stocking and the silence imposed by my anonymous friend bade me wait.

"Oh, for a lending library or a tea-room." I took the defensive. "I'm really a teacher, stranded without a school. This hostess business is just a vacation affair."

"But a lending library—so far from town?"

I could see he didn't believe me, though I looked him straight in the eye. "Well, if you want to write mystery stories, here's one ready-made. All you have to do is fill in the gaps."

"It's perfect. Couldn't have asked anything better."

"Even if you had constructed it yourself? Did you?"

"The girl has a criminal instinct. Miss Jason, you must go to bed. Tomorrow'll be a lallapalooza. But if you get a minute, will you jot down anything unusual that occurs to you about this business? Help me work it out? We've quite a head start on the police."

It was after midnight. I promised and said goodnight. But though he sent me to bed, Mr. Quade seemed reluctant to let me go. It would be easy enough to check up whose masher was missing, he said, but the police would be leary of a murder with no body. The bridge was different. Time bomb, he decided. He hoped something definite would be washed ashore. Just one more question, and he'd let me go. Why should Lane want that wretched little church enough to come just for the auction, wherever he'd come from?

"Somewhere out West," I told him. "Los Angeles, I think, or San Francisco. I don't know why he should want the church, either, or how he knew about the auction. The castle has the most scenic position on the Head but he never goes there any more. Been trying to sell it."

"Probably takes the local Rockville papers. That's how he knew about the auction. Good night." He smiled at me and I liked him.

"Don't worry."

"Good night."

I turned on the dimmer in the hallway and started upstairs. Halfway up I felt, rather than saw, someone staring down at me. Petrified, I forced myself to look up. Bessie Norcross was leaning over the banisters.

"Oh, I'm so glad it's you, Judy," she said. "I heard voices and hoped you hadn't come up yet. Did you get my key?"

What did she know? How long had she been there? Had she heard anything of the goings-on? Apparently not or she'd have yelled for her brother.

"I'm so sorry, Miss Norcross. I did get you a key, but left it down at the church in my bag, after the auction. You shall have it tomorrow without fail."

"Well, I'd like it tonight. Do you know your guests have been missing things out of their rooms?"

"Sh-h-h-h! Please. Nobody has reported—"

"Well, I know better. Mr. Potter's just discovered he has lost a bottle of turpentine and he's furious. Have to go to Rockville for more, he said, and he wants to finish his picture of the old Quaker church in the morning. And I've lost that lovely blue scarf I wear around my head. It's Hugh's really, but—"

Turpentine! A silk scarf! I tried to keep the annoyance out of my tone. "They'll turn up. Who'd steal turpentine? As for the scarf, maybe your brother borrowed it back. Stick a chair under your doorknob. I'll get that key the first thing tomorrow."

I brushed by her. She'd had a good sleep, but now that the effects of her sleeping medicine had worn off, she'd talk all night if I'd let her.

"Don't believe they'll find him," Victor Quade said.

Tomorrow I'd help Victor Quade. I mustn't forget to jot down the fact that Thaddeus Q. could manage to get around without his chair. Nor that I'd called to the man we'd heard running near our path and he hadn't answered.

The old house settled down to a stillness like the night before Christmas. If creatures were stirring, they were mighty quiet about it. I tried to keep the horrible thing I'd seen at the church out of my mind. The church. Poor place for a tea-room or lending library. Victor was right. Tomorrow I'd show him the queer letter. Tell him the whole strange—

I vow I wasn't sound. Like Jack and Jill, Hugh and I had just gone up a hill to fetch a pail of kerosene when the whole hill exploded and I sat straight up in bed.

Such a pounding and shouting and running of feet. Then my door flew open and Aunt Nella screamed: "The house is afire!"

My little front window was a glare of light. For a second I hugged the bed clothes around me and held my breath. The house must be afire; there were the flames. But I didn't smell any smoke. I ran to the window, sensing that the Neck side was still dark, so it couldn't yet be daylight.

From the front I saw what looked like a blazing oil well. Was it my little church? My tea room?

Aunt Nella thought so, too. "All that money," she hissed, "gone up in smoke!"

"But it looks nearer, Auntie."

"So it does. Lucky the wind's the other way."

"It's the fish shed. Who'd have thought it would make such a blaze? Oh, that poor old man—I!" I grabbed my shoes and a robe.

"An' him deaf, so's he couldn't hear the crackle. They'll never get him out." Aunt Nella clenched her gnarled hands. "Suppose somebody set it?"

We were both remembering Uncle Willie had wandered down there a few hours ago and that he'd threatened to burn the fish shed many times.

Aunt Nella began to cry. "Poor Willie. I'd a-been a widow if we hadn't found him on that bench asleep."

If Uncle Willie had dropped, say, his lighted pipe—and set fire to the old shed and burned up Old Man Brown she might still be a widow. Would they electrocute him or give him life?

"Get some clothes on, Auntie."

"I put my shoes on the wrong feet and had to take them off again. My aunt was wrestling with a cherished old-fashioned woven union suit, seat over her head and arms in the legs. I had to extricate her.

Below, doors banged. Cries of fire arose. I could hear Bessie Norcross screaming hysterically. Why didn't the fire whistle from Rockville blow? Surely someone must have telephoned by now. With sharp horror I realized the wires had been cut. And now, wouldn't Rockville mistake it for a night-before-the-Fourth bonfire?

I had on my terry cloth bathrobe and raced downstairs. Heads popped out of doors shouting questions, giving information. "Call the fire department!" "The church is afire!" "No, it's the castle!" "The whole Head's ablaze!"

It seemed as if the entire household had run down to the front hall in utter terror, and not much else. Lily Kendall looked like a bowl of shimmering jelly in her apricot satin nightgown.

"Come on," I cried. "There's an old man—stone deaf—in that blazing shed. Oh, I hope it's not too late!"

We raced down in a body, apparently everybody. At a time like that one doesn't stop to count. But I saw two figures silhouetted against the flames, which turned out to be Victor Quade and the Rev. De Witt.

"Can't we do something?" Hugh Norcross called to them. I hadn't noticed Hugh before, but down there it was so light I could even see that his robe was green.

"Not much. Death to try," a voice said.

"But, good heavens, man! There's a human being in there. We've got to try to get him out!" boomed the minister.

"How?"

"Bucket brigade, or something."

We all knew the futility, as even De Witt's voice faltered.

"Wouldn't be any use," somebody said. "If he's still in there he's past help."

"Doesn't look like an ordinary fire. Did you ever see anything blaze so? And I thought I heard another explosion."

We were all shouting. I couldn't tell who said what, but all agreed as to a second muffled explosion, not so loud as the first, just before they'd rushed to see flames. They began searching, calling for Brown.

"Don't believe they'll find him," Victor Quade said, drawing me away from the heat. "If he'd discovered the building on fire in time to get out, he'd have gone straight to the inn for help, wouldn't he? But let them try."

"I'm going to hunt, too. Down by the church."

Hugh Norcross grabbed my arm. "Young lady, you aren't going alone. Bessie and I—"

"Don't be silly, Hugh. I'm not going in. But suppose he staggered out, confused, and went in that direction. You and Bessie take the route to the castle. Here, Mr. Potter, you come along with me."

To my surprise the artist hung back. "I'll go if another man will go, Quade or somebody. You see, Judy, you don't know it, but from the way that fire burns I can't help wondering if my turpentine wasn't poured on it. Someone stole it last night from my room." And he added sententiously: "Must have been while I was up to Rockville. I remember deciding I had plenty and leaving the bottle right there on the table with my palette and brushes."

I left him to tell Victor about the turpentine.

"Turpentine! I'll bet that shed was full of tar paper and oiled ropes and stuff. Your Uncle Willie would know. Used gasoline, too, I'll bet. No wonder there was an explosion. Judy Jason," he whispered, "keep with the crowd!"

Well, it was terrible. There we stood, a group of able-bodied human beings helplessly watching the conflagration burn itself down and knowing another human being was probably being roasted.

When the clergyman came puffing down the path with Aunt Nella's scrub pail full of water which he gallantly threw on the fire, only apparently to augment the flames, I began to laugh and cry just like Bessie Norcross.

"Lane did this. Roddy Lane. A final gesture. Hoped the inn would catch fire. Blew up the bridge and skipped." Bessie seemed sure of it. Nobody paid any attention to her. Her sequence of events was slightly off, but then she'd been under sleeping medicine when the first explosion had taken place. Hugh was trying to persuade her to go back to bed.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

JESUS AFFIRMS HIS DEITY

LESSON TEXT—John 8:12, 25-36, 56-59.
GOLDEN TEXT—He that hath seen me hath seen the Father.—John 14:9.

"The Light of the World Is Jesus!" Who does not remember with what delight we as children sang, "Come to the light, 'tis shining for thee . . . The light of the world is Jesus."

How precious was the truth that thus flooded our souls. Jesus is the light. Just as the sunlight sheds its glory on an awakening world at dawn, so He sheds abroad the light of God in the hearts of men. As this portion of God's Holy Word is studied and taught, may the light break forth on many a soul caught in the bewilderment of this dark world.

But that is only one of the great thoughts around which our lesson centers. As Jesus here reveals Himself as divine, we consider four simple words, each fraught with rich meaning.

I. Light (v. 12).
The text says: "Then spake Jesus." When? Just after He had silenced the hypocritical accusers of a woman taken in sin, and had spoken the word of peace to her troubled soul. She was to "go and sin no more" because she had met Him who is the light of the world.

They that follow Him "shall not walk in darkness"; they are the children of light, they have the very light of life shining in their hearts and lives.

Not only does Jesus light the believer's heart, but this light shines into all the dark corners of this wicked world, exposing sin and hypocrisy, and showing the way back to God.

II. Salvation (vv. 25-30).
"Who art thou?" That is the question every man must ask and answer as he considers Jesus. Even neglect is an answer—a rejection.

The answer of Christ in these verses goes to the very heart of the matter, for He takes the people right to the cross of Calvary. When they had crucified Him, they would know. Did not the centurion say: "Truly this was the Son of God" (Matt. 27:54)?

It is true today that no man knows Christ until he knows Him as the crucified Saviour. Teacher, Example, Guide—all these He is—but they are not enough, for we sinners need a Saviour. May many today follow the example of verse 30.

III. Freedom (vv. 31-36).
Free! Four letters, but what a depth of meaning! Chains have fallen off, prison doors are open. The one who was bound is free.

But here we are concerned with an even more important liberty, the freedom of the soul. Many there are who boast of their independence but who are naught but slaves. Jesus said: "Whosoever commiteth sin is the servant of sin" (v. 34), not its master.

How shall they be freed? Note three things in these verses:

(1) A condition, "If ye continue in my word." This means not only a profession of faith, but a daily appropriation and realization of His truth in life.

(2) A promise, "Ye shall know the truth." The philosophies of men profess to be a seeking after truth, but how few there are who look to the one place where it can be found—in Jesus Christ.

(3) A result, "The truth shall make you free." Truth always sets free. Men are enslaved because, as in some foreign lands, they have not had the opportunity to learn the truth or because they have rejected it.

Men profess to seek truth in their research and in the process of education, but without Christ they cannot have real truth. Educational systems which rule Him out are deficient and lead to bondage rather than freedom.

IV. Eternity (vv. 56-59).

Taking up their statement that they were Abraham's children (see vv. 33, 37), Jesus enters into the sharpest controversy with the unbelieving Jews of His entire earthly ministry. They were claiming kinship with a great man of faith who in his day had looked forward to the coming of Christ (v. 56). Now He was here, and instead of receiving Him as their Messiah they were ready to kill Him.

Not only did they claim Abraham as father, but also God. Jesus told them that in their sin and unbelief they were of their "father the devil." It is possible, then, to be very religious, to follow the traditions of one's fathers, and yet to be children of the devil.

All this led up to their sharp rebuke in verse 57, which denied to Christ anything but an earthly existence and which led Him to the statement of His eternity. He identified Himself definitely and clearly with the Eternal One—the great I AM of Exodus 3:14.

Christ is God, and is therefore "infinite, eternal, and unchangeable in His being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth" (Westminster Catechism).

Dear Friends:

Just a few lines to let you know that I received the very nice Christmas package from the service committee also many cards and packages from my many friends and I want to thank every one of you for remembering me on Christmas.

We are having very warm weather, lately it has been real summer weather down here the past week.

I have moved again and am at Morehead City so will enclose my new address at the end of this letter. So here's wishing you a healthy and Happy New Year and also want to say hello to all my friends in Tinley Park.

I remain your friend,
Pfc Elmer Steinborn, Co. G, 11 Inf. Morehead City, N. C.
PS Please send the Tinley Times to this address.

Editor's Note:—Can't understand you not getting the Times. We have been sending it to you each week, although we have a Serial No. with your name. Let us know if you still do not get it.

January 2, 1943.

Happy New Year Folks

I want to thank you for the swell Xmas package. I received it about ten days ago. Whoever put up the package sure knows what a fellow in the service can use.

It didn't seem very much like Xmas here. Partially because of being away from Tinley Park and partially because of the climate. Instead of cold weather and snow, we are just getting our hot weather and the birds are starting to build their nests. Our Xmas service was held in a grass hut swarming mosquitoes. My opinion of the island on which we are stationed is, that it would be a grand place to spend a week's vacation on, but that's enough. It is really a beautiful place as far as tropical islands go. But give me Illinois.

Thanks again for the Xmas gift. Howard Mager, Somewhere in the South Sea Islands

Citizens Service Committee:

Thank you very much for the two lovely useful gifts you sent me. It was indeed a surprise and a very pleasant surprise though I'll say. I can sure use them.

I hope you all had a very happy and merry Christmas and wishing you a happy New Year.

Yours truly,
Pvt. Lester Nieman, Camp Davis, N. C.

Citizens Service Committee:

Received your box some time ago but couldn't write right away. We've been pretty busy lately with one thing or another. I hope you had a very Merry Xmas and that you will have a very Happy New Year.

We spent Xmas at sea but had a very fine dinner. I wish I could have been home on Xmas day, but it looks like I'll have to stay for a while yet. I hope to get home soon though. Well I will close now and write later.

Sincerely yours,
Irving Bettenhausen, USCG Detail, Wineryard Haven, Mass.

Jan. 7, 1943

Dear Friends:

Have meant to write sooner and thank you for the nice Xmas box but I've been rushed with mail so much around Christmas time that I'm just starting to catch up. That box you sent was sure nice thanks a lot sure makes a soldier feel good to know the folks back home are thinking of him.

I had a very nice Christmas this year, received quite a few boxes and packages from a lot of friends and relatives. I received about 40 Xmas cards. In all my Xmas was a happy one and I sure appreciate everything.

Well a little bit about myself now. I am still here at Fort Sill and in the 18th FA Regiment and like it a lot. But am assigned to a different job now. I am a supply Clerk for the 4th Battalion Motor Shop and am looking for another rating soon.

The weather here at the present time is like springtime in Tinley Park real nice sunshine every day and rather warm. Really haven't had any cold weather as yet but the nights are rather cool.

The country out here is sort of dry and sandy red sand at that, and a lot of rocks. Have a lot of lakes in the Wichita Mountains and lots of game such as buffalo, deer, bear and several small animals and lots of pretty birds. Oh yes I can't forget the nice big rattlesnakes and prairie dogs. Then we have Mt. Scott one of the highest mountains in Oklahoma, practically all rocks very pretty to see. Well I guess it's about bed time now so will close with this thought.

Knowing that all the boys appreciate your kindness of sending the Tinley Park Times and goodies.

I remain as ever,

Pfc Glenn H. Nieland, Service Btry 4th Bn. 18th FA, Fort Sill, Okla. ASN 3633080.

P.S. The Times arriving every week on time is good to receive the home town News.

A soldier in Africa

Dear Friends:

I received the package you sent me last night and want to extend my thanks to all whose thoughtfulness was represented by that swell and very useful gift. I have received a couple of Tinley Park newspapers in the last two weeks but as there was no return address I had no way of knowing who to thank. I'm sure you folks had something to do with it so please accept my thanks again. It's swell to know that even though we Servicemen are way over here in No. Africa, there are still friends and neighbors back home who think enough of us to remember us with gifts and news of home.

This is a very short letter but there is really nothing more I can write because of the censors. My wife and I are new in Tinley Park and I'm sure proud to think my new friends are so thoughtful. My wife has mentioned your friendliness toward her several times.

Dear Friends:

I wish to thank each and everyone of you for the Christmas package and for the Christmas card I received yesterday afternoon. I also wish to thank the Tinley Park Garden Club for the wonderful handkerchiefs. I can honestly say that I like this new life that I've already started. We have good meals, good sleeping quarters and plenty of recreation. I will close now for I can't think of anything to say at the moment. Thanks again for everything.

Your friend,
Leonard Machtemes, S 2-c, NOB Barracks 5 Sec. 1, Receiving Station Unit D, Norfolk, Va.

PS. I would appreciate it very much if I could receive the Tinley Park Times.

Editor's Note:—We have been sending you the Times each week, to the address you gave. Is there some place you can make inquiry for it?

When Meat Rationing Comes

When meat rationing comes, don't hold out for your favorite cuts. There may not be enough of them to go around. Besides, as Mrs. Julia Kiene, Manager of Westinghouse Home Economics Institute, points out, there are more than 250 retail cuts of beef, pork, lamb, veal and their by products to choose from. As have approximately the same food value, and that's what counts in keeping the health of the family up to par. Brush up on cuts of meat and you've mastered the big trick of coping with meat rationing. Mrs. Julia Kiene, Manager of Home Economics Department at Westinghouse, explains that with the exception of loin end, short loin, rib, and ground round which may be cooked with dry heat, that is broiling or roasting, all other cuts of meat require moist heat which means simmering, stewing and braising.

When it comes to stretching the meat budget, you can't beat the cheaper cuts. Not only are they kind to the pocketbook, but as Westinghouse home economists point out, they will be easy on the ration card. Take flank steak, for example. It's boneless, which makes it an excellent buy. To make it more tender and to shorten cooking time, have the butcher "score" it.

Roasts will go further if cooked in a low temperature oven, say Westinghouse home economists. The low temperature reduces cooking losses, produces more uniform results, and the bones and fat don't get charred. Don't sear meat, it causes shrinkage and none of us can afford that in these days.

For the duration at least, forget that you don't like liver, pork liver especially. It is tops on the health ladder, is least expensive to buy and isn't likely to be rationed. Cut off tough membrane around the outer edge and see if it doesn't make it more tender. This tough membrane is one of the causes contributing to pork liver's unpopularity. Westinghouse home economists say.

Secret of cooking minute steaks, is to have skillet very hot, use only enough melted fat to keep steak from sticking and, of course, keep

Two Way Co-operation

Government authorities have asked producers and distributors to co-operate to the maximum of their ability in the task of supplying necessities to civilians and military personnel. They have been told that they must also prepare to supply these necessities to other nations, all from the resources of the United States. This is a big order. It can only be fulfilled if cooperation comes from both sides, from the government as well as from the private citizen. It cannot be fulfilled if the private citizen is threatened with jail every time he makes a mistake. It cannot be fulfilled unless common sense is a part of government policy.

A good example of how to create more chaos recently came to light in the nation's capital. A large department store has been named defendant by the Office of Price Administration in legal proceedings for alleged violation of price regulations.

In view of facts, suggestions of whether the store was actually guilty is more or less academic. According to news reports, the store's price bureau now has on hand three bound volumes of price regulations which total 13,423 pages of closely printed, small type text, and contain an estimated 11,275,000 words. The store is now spending more than $40,000 a year in direct costs to maintain its own "price compliance" bureau. This bureau has 27 full time employees. Working full time in addition to these, is a mimeograph operator who in the last six weeks has turned out 50,000 forms. A regulation involving the price of toilet paper took a lawyer and three store executives five days at full time to make it understandable. In another case, picked from scores, 106 pillows were purchased. Before they could be sold, 104 different and distinct forms had to be filled out establishing 104 price ceilings because there were 104 different styles among the 106 pillows. The manager of the store in question has been in business 31 years.

Social Hygiene Day

Wednesday, February 3rd was designated as "Social Hygiene Day". The last war and the present world war have made it necessary for our country to face the problem of venereal diseases.

In Illinois for the first eleven months of the year 1942 there were reported 26,200 cases of syphilis and 19,112 cases of gonorrhea. With these figures in mind, it is essential to keep the public informed of this menace and its spread. We are interested in the control of diphtheria, pneumonia and infantile paralysis so why not be concerned with our venereal disease problem?

Do you know—Today we are cautioned not to waste one single thing, therefore, can we continue to waste man and woman power thru serious disability caused by gonorrhea and syphilis? This disability is not a personal matter. It is a public health question. It may even be a matter of winning the war and winning the peace.

Do you know—Medical science has learned much concerning control and the treatment of these diseases and the public should avail itself of this knowledge. Early diagnosis is important as the average person with syphilis usually exposes several others to the disease.

The Selective Service System is discovering numerous venereal disease cases that were hitherto unknown, as are special blood testing surveys undertaken among groups of industrial employees. Those who did not know they had the disease should be glad that discovery has been made so that necessary treatment may be instituted. Months of treatment may be necessary but the cure is well worth the time, money and sacrifice entailed.

Do you know—The State of Illinois has a law making it obligatory to use silver nitrate in the eyes of new born babies to prevent ophthalmia neonatorum from the germs of gonorrhea. This was a forward step in the prevention of blindness in Illinois. The Premarital Examination Law is also proving its worth.

Electric Power Speeds Torpedo Production in Northern Illinois

In supplying America's ships of war with thousands of torpedoes, electricity is a mighty production facility.

Electricity illuminates the torpedo plant—the machines and assembly lines—it drives the lathes and drills—it runs the grinding and stamping machines—it propels the huge conveyors and giant cranes.

Electricity is the power behind industrial activity—the power behind the nation's great war production program.

With a great splash, a giant torpedo hits the water as it leaves the tube of the U. S. S. Herbert in a demonstration firing. (Official U. S. Navy Photograph.)

In smoothing down the torpedo air flasks to a fine, sleek finish, electricity is the power behind the machine. (Official O. W. I. Photograph.)

PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY OF NORTHERN ILLINOIS

Supplying Vital Electric Power for War Production in Northern Illinois

Enlistments For 4H Army

Cook County boys and girls will be given the opportunity of enlisting for service on the home front by becoming members of the army of 3,000,000 4H members being recruited by Uncle Sam during mobilization week, February 6 to 14, it was announced today by home Adviser Marie Cornelius and Assistant Farm Adviser Charles N. Glover.

During this week, a special effort will be made to reach every rural boy and girl within the age limits of 10 through 20 to tell them about 4H club work and how, by being a member, they can make a special contribution to our war effort.

Last year Cook county had 137 boys enrolled in agricultural clubs and 203 girls enrolled in home economics clubs. For Illinois there were 13,696 girls enrolled in 1,262 home economics clubs and 18,733 boys in 1,055 agricultural clubs in all but one of the 102 counties. The recruiting program soon to get under way, aims at doubling these membership totals.

Every 4H member belongs to a local club and carries out a project at home under the supervision of an adult known as a local leader. Five or more members are organized into a local club under the supervision of a leader, the county farm and home adviser and the extension service of the University of Illinois College of Agriculture.

Special radio broadcasts are being planned for radio stations through out the state and over national networks.

Dear Mr. Semmler:

Having finally found time, I will drop you a few lines. I want to thank you for sending the News-Bulletin which I have been receiving regularly. It is swell to get the home news.

The weather here has been very cold. It dropped as low as 20 below zero in parts of Missouri. It was 13 below here. We spent those cold days camping out in the woods. The boys never complained that the barracks are too cold since then. They all appreciate them, after sleeping out in the cold. All in all, I like the weather here, a lot better than at Fort McClellan, Ala. Hope to see good old Mokena soon.

As this paper reaches most of the boys in Service from and around Mokena, I will say, Hello and best of luck to them all.

Sincerely yours,
Pvt. Richard A. Walsh,
Co. F, 121st Inf. APO 8, Fort Leonard Woods, Mo.

Editor's Note: Swell letter Dick. Surprised to hear of such cold weather down there where we have been and where it is not supposed to get very cold. Be looking for you.

And now for another letter received from somewhere in the Pacific, dated Jan. 13:

"Received your most welcome box today and sure was glad to get it as everything can be put to good use. I would like to let you know where I am so you would know how important your package was, but I can't do that for certain reasons. We are pretty well taken care of here at least as well as could be expected under the circumstances. I have been with the Marines now and like their rugged life very much. There is just one thing I didn't like and that is as you know I have been out of the States six of my eight months, but I guess we'll never get this thing over with by sitting around in the States. As far as I know I receive most of my mail even if it does take a little time for it to get here. Well, thank you again for the package. Will write again in the near future.

Scourging the Scourge

By Don W. Gudakunst, M. D.

Medical Director, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

WALTER WINCHELL has returned from a tour of duty outside the U. S. and will soon resume writing his column as usual.

The outlook in the battle against infantile paralysis, like the outlook in the war against the enemies of democracy, is encouraging.

The fight goes on, propelled by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and by the dollars and dimes of a fighting people who celebrate the birthday of the President by dancing so that others may walk.

No cure has been found, but the Sister Kenny treatments, taught to doctors and nurses all over the land by the famous Australian nurse, here since 1940, alleviate suffering and reduce crippling after-effects. It must be emphasized, the Kenny method is NOT a cure, though it restores about 80 per cent to normal life and the other 20 per cent are generally helped.

It takes one nurse and two assistants to treat 10 patients with the Kenny method. The nurse can learn her part in a week, but it takes the physiotherapist months to master the art of teaching paralyzed muscles to work again.

The cotton rats used in polio virus research come from southeastern United States. After trying to breed them in captivity, scientists discovered they would not mate unless they smelled alike. So they were sprayed with creosote—and all raised families.

Poliomyelitis, polio or infantile paralysis—whatever you call it—is an old disease. A picture carved on a tomb in Egypt 4,000 years ago, and mummies from the Land of the Pharaohs prove it.

Many persons have had poliomyelitis, recovered and never knew they had it. They are carriers. It is estimated there are 50 to 1,000 "carriers" to every victim. "Carriers" become nauseated but, fortunately for them, the virus centers in the digestive system instead of in the spinal cord nerves.

Poliomyelitis is taken from the Greek—"polios" meaning "gray," plus "myelos" meaning "marrow," plus "itis." Victims call one another "polios."

Each year there are in the United States an average of 8,000 to 10,000 victims of this disease. Many become cripples beyond cure. The greatest epidemic in this country was in 1916—over 27,000 reported cases.

Many children, badly crippled, were not discovered until later. Many died without the true cause of their death being known. These cases were in the East, near New York, Philadelphia, Boston and New Haven—cities where there are excellent doctors and plenty of hospitals.

Maybe you are one of many people who think all of the dimes and dollars go to the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation. They do not. Half of the money goes to the counties which contributed for local relief; the other half is retained by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. It is used when an epidemic strikes and for research to try to find the cause, the preventive and cure of the disease.

Infantile paralysis strikes the rich and the poor alike. Epidemics are not always near great medical centers. The first cases discovered by Nurse Kenny were children in families who lived 10 miles from any neighbor or telephones, telegraph and improved roads. It was over 200 miles to the nearest doctor and hospital. This was 30 years ago.

In 1942 there were two places in the United States that were hard hit; one was thickly settled, fairly wealthy New Jersey, with plenty of doctors, nurses and hospitals; the other was Arkansas, where there was but one hospital in all the State willing to admit any case of infantile paralysis in its acute stage. This hospital could not begin to care for the 100 children who applied for treatment the first few weeks.

That is where the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis came into the picture. It had money. It knew where to secure nurses trained in the Kenny method. Of that hundred and more patients almost all have now gone home restored to health. Of the rest, all but a very few will soon be walking, their condition good.

It costs about $1,800 to keep one child in a hospital for a year, under the Kenny treatment. But that one year may mean freedom to that child for a lifetime. At a dime apiece 18,000 people have contributed to treat that child.

Throughout the country there are now 2,494 local Chapters of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. They cover 2,894 of the nation's 3,050 counties. If you were stricken tomorrow, regardless of race, creed, age, color, one of these units would help you.

ARMY'S SIZE AND LABOR PROBLEMS

Manpower Boss Paul McNutt has been sessioning with the Truman committee regarding certain problems which touch the lives of everyone. They include size of the army, where we will get labor for farms, and whether the army shall be used in mines and industry.

Senators on the committee were impressed both with the gravity of the problems McNutt placed before them, and his general views regarding them.

McNutt revealed that Undersecretary of War Patterson had been talking to him about a total armed force of 11,000,000 to 15,000,000 men. This included not merely the army, but the navy, the coast guard and the marine corps—everything except the merchant marine.

However, McNutt pointed out that shipping facilities and submarine warfare seriously limited the number of troops which could be sent abroad and supplied. The figure he mentioned must remain a military secret, but he indicated that with Hitler's U-boats working overtime around North Africa, it was going to be difficult to maintain a very large army in North Africa.

In addition to North Africa, he pointed to the problem of supplying other war fronts in the Pacific, together with Russia and England.

As a result, McNutt doubted the feasibility of a world's record army now. He was all for giving the military and navy what they wanted so long as it could be transported to the combat zones, but he opposed a huge army which would eat its head off at home, especially in view of the fact that morale deteriorates when an army is kept idle.

At one time, McNutt said, a large army at home was considered necessary to protect the United States. But now military experts felt this danger greatly lessened, though a certain number of reserves must be trained.

Army and Industry.

McNutt was asked a great many questions about farm labor, especially by Senator Truman of Missouri. He replied that the army had been unwilling to let men go home on furlough to help with the crops because this hurt morale. However, he said the army was working on a plan to send army units into farm areas, in battalions or companies, and have them help with farm work on an organized basis under army command.

Though the matter was not discussed in detail, it seemed to be the unspoken feeling of the committee that too big an army going into industry and agriculture on an organized military basis might come close to developing a militarized system in the U. S. A. similar to that against which we were fighting in Europe.

Only one member of the committee, Senator Hatch of New Mexico, felt that the armed forces should be given free rein to go ahead and build up tremendous strength not subject to civilian check and supervision.

Other committee members expressed the view that it was only natural for any military leader to want the army to be the biggest in the world; so a civilian check-rein by the White House or congress was necessary to balance farm labor and industry against armed strength.

Finally it was decided that the most important problems to lick before increasing the army to world-beating proportions was the submarine and shipping.

OFFICIALS SAVE GAS

Some few Washington bigwigs are careless about gasoline rationing, but they are exceptions. Most Washington officialdom is scrupulously careful.

The chief justice of the United States, for instance, is riding a truck. Chief Justice Stone has discarded his private car as a means of getting to and from the Supreme court, and instead hitch-hikes in the delivery truck which runs errands for the court. In addition, Stone is one of the walkingest members of the court.

The White House uses 11 cars now, against 15 a year ago, and these include trucks for the White House mail, as well as cars for the President and staff. White House Secretary Marvin McIntyre now rides to work in a Ford instead of a Packard.

Vice President Henry Wallace last fall abandoned his 16-cylinder limousine in favor of a humble five passenger sedan. Every morning he walks the five miles from the Wardman Park hotel to the Capitol, and rides home in the evening.

Speaker Sam Rayburn uses his official car sparingly. He often walks from his apartment on DuPont Circle to Seventh street, where he takes a street car to the Capitol.

Senator Thomas of Oklahoma gets to work on foot or by bus. The other day a Capitol clerk gave him a lift from a bus stop on 16th street.

Milo Perkins, chief of the Board of Economic Warfare, shuns the use of his official car in driving from home to office. Instead, he has joined a car pool with six other BEW members who live in the same section.

Farmers' Problems Now Exceed Others'

He Must Supervise His Three Main Jobs

The farmer's problems in this war are much more difficult than those of most other people, says Roy E. Moser, extension economist of the Massachusetts State college extension service. This is due mainly to the fact that the farmer must finance both his job and his home at the same time. The majority of people work for someone else and their jobs are financed for them. On the other hand, the farmer's opportunities to be of service equal those of any other group.

The greatest production of all time which is planned to fill needs that have been determined in advance: That is the American farmer's answer to the challenge of war.

The production of essential foods is equally as important as the production of planes, guns, and ships. And it will continue to be important long after the roar of battle has stopped.

Mr. Moser outlines three main jobs of farmers in the present emergency.

The farmer's first and most important job is to make the farm produce its maximum of essential foods in spite of labor shortages, lack of machinery, and other problems.

The farmer's second job is to get his debts in shape by reducing present debts to a safe basis. Moser points out that there is no conflict between the reduction of debts and the war bond program. Income paid on debts does not compete with the war bond effort.

His third job is to invest in war bonds when debts have been reduced completely or to moderate amounts. It is imperative that farmers as well as other citizens eliminate unnecessary spending and loan these savings to the government by investing in war bonds.

Agriculture in Industry

By FLORENCE C. WEED

Cereal Straws

"The time is coming when the farmer will become the supplier of the materials used in industry." This forecast was made by the late Francis P. Garvan, first president of the Chemical Foundation Inc.

Cereal straws are a fine example of the industrial possibilities of farm products. For years, they have been used in making paper and more recently in making fiber board. Most of the 84 million tons of straw is produced in Kansas, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Wheat straw is the most important industrially and about 575,000 tons are used for paper and paper board each year. Wheat straw yields the best quality product although some rye and barley straw may be combined with wheat without altering the quality. One problem is that of collecting it economically from individual farms.

Straw has a long history as a paper making material being first used in Germany in 1765. In the United States the first straw paper was made in 1828 by William Magaw of Meadville, Pa. The industry still continues in this country and science has developed several improved pulping methods to lower costs and improve the product.

Rural Briefs

Moderate but definite improvements were apparent in the food situation of the United Kingdom from the spring of 1941 to the outbreak of war in the Pacific, according to British nutritionist reports.

The use to which land is put and the treatment it receives are among the primary factors governing farm income, agricultural experts point out.

STUNTED GROWTH

A New Yorker drove his country cousin round the city, pointing out its various wonders. He slowed his car before a tall building.

"Look at this building," the New Yorker said, proudly. "It's one hundred stories high."

The farmer nodded slowly. "Doggone fine building," he admitted. "Makes yer haid spin jest to look up at it."

The pair drove on and the city man paused to single out another building.

"Here's a new skyscraper—fifty stories," he said.

The farmer stroked his chin. "Fifty stories, eh?" he drawled. "What made them stop in the middle?"

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Between 28 and 33 per cent of the road service calls answered by AAA clubs are in response to tire trouble—flats. Battery problems cause the second largest number of road calls for help.

American synthetic rubber will fill 90 per cent of the country's rubber needs, within two years of Pearl Harbor, according to a rubber chemist. This will be a speedy transition from natural rubber. Germany which started synthetic rubber development prior to 1914 can now only take care of 75 per cent of its rubber needs with synthetic.

Rubber tired trucks have been hauling about 18 per cent as many ton-miles as the railroads. ODT officials say.

Until gasoline rationing was applied as a brake, the car owners of the country were wasting 48 750,000 pounds of tread rubber from their tires every day, a government statistician asserts.

SOMEBODY'S STENO--There's Too Much Freedom

THIS colorful afghan was made by clever fingers from the best parts of old woolen garments put together with odds and ends of bright yarn. Even trousers and fitted jackets yielded strips of the size required.

By holding the goods up to the light it is easy to find the unworn parts. These are cut out roughly; washed with mild soap in lukewarm water; rinsed with a little soap in warm water; and pressed while damp. The pieces are then cut accurately according to the measurements given here. Single crochet stitch is used around all pieces, and the sketch shows how the pieces are sewn together.

A letter from Corp. Owen Strong who is stationed with the 3 Bn. Hq. Co. 174th Inf. at Vantura, Cal. says that their camp is only four miles from the Hollywood Canteen and that the boys are entertained nightly by the various movie stars, headed by Bob Hope and Red Skelton.

Buy Our Feeds

Our feeds are properly balanced with vitamins and cod liver oil. Nine times out of 10 low production and colds in chickens is caused by lack of Cod Liver Oil. We manufacture our own feeds and sell these high grade feeds for less than you can buy inferior grade feeds. We also manufacture a full line of Dairy, Hog, Goat and Rabbit and Poultry Feeds. Also Hog and Poultry and Dairy concentrates. Always the best is less.
